Why is ENLACE interested in public policy?
Public policies, within the educational context, are the rules that shape how students and families are served by schools. Moving institutions to change their policies and practices is challenging work. With regard to policy change, ENLACE successes come from making connections between institutions, communities, and families and then problem-solving together. ENLACE seeks to be recognized as a leader in involving communities in the legislative process on issues relating to educational reform. As a collaborative we influence decisions concerning important issues by working with elected officials in our communities, our state capital and Washington, D.C.

How are legislative issues and priorities identified?
Our goal is a policy agenda which reflects the issues, concerns and priorities of ENLACE stakeholders, including students, families, and other community members in promoting educational equity for all students and to improve academic performance throughout the P-20 pathway in New Mexico. Defining policy issues and priorities is an evolving process which began in 2001; annual community forums allow us to update and polish our policy agenda.

How can I get involved?
It is your right and responsibility to connect with state legislators and members of congress. For information regarding specific legislation or to find out how to become more involved, please contact ENLACE New Mexico at (505) 277-5481.

Student Success Initiatives
ENLACE’s culturally relevant coaching and mentoring programs promote academic and personal success among elementary, middle and high school students as well as students in higher education. Programs focus particularly on students from diverse economic and cultural backgrounds.

Family & Community Engagement Initiatives
The ability for students to succeed in their education depends greatly on their families’ level of involvement as well as support from their communities. ENLACE New Mexico remains dedicated to our mission of providing avenues for engagement, involvement, and growth for families and communities across New Mexico.

Leadership & Professional Development
We provide opportunities for participants to engage in a variety of leadership and professional development initiatives throughout each year. These include conferences, colloquia, symposia, workshops, and training sessions in collaboration with numerous state, national, and international partners.
